Changes to NAD Disclaimer

- NAD Disclaimer (<https://www.transportation.gov/gis/national-address-database/national-address-database-nad-disclaimer>) was developed prior to publishing Release 1 of the NAD.
- Some private sector companies wanted a more explicit statement about the NAD being fully in the public domain and free of copyright restrictions.
- After discussing, and rejecting, various Creative Commons designations with DOT Counsel, it was decided to add a paragraph to the disclaimer.

Changes to NAD Disclaimer

Published data made available as a part of the NAD is provided as a public service to enhance open government, transparency, and accountability. The NAD is a compilation of data provided by state, local, and tribal governments and is made available “as is.” The NAD is a work of the federal government and as such is not subject to copyright protection in accordance with 17 U.S.C. § 105.
